FOUND AT LAST.

SWIFT'S SILVER MINE DISCOVERED

In Wolfe County, and The Herald Man
One of the Lucky Possessors.

The existence of a rich silver mine in Eastern Kentucky, has been a tradition among the Indians for many years past.
It was a lost mine when Daniel Boone and his companions first discovered "The Dark and Bloody Ground," so named by the Indians on account of the traditional slaughter of their ancestors within its borders, accounts of which had been handed down to them. All the tribes were strong, and in their places the ghosts of the departed red men were supposed to wander among the solitude.

Hence the reason that when Boone came to Kentucky, he found no Indians dwelling within its borders. He found, however, along the Great War Road, which led from the Cumberland and Tennessee valleys, and thence to the Pickaway and Scioto towns, numerous bands of Indians engaged in the chase. Before the advent of Boone into Kentucky, in 1779, a man by the name of Swift, accompanied by several companions, left Baltimore and struck out for the wilderness, being induced to do so by the reports of the existence of a great silver mine which he had worked while a captive among the Indians. They carried their packs on mules, and for days journeyed over hills and valleys toward the West. After a long and exhausting march they arrived on the East branch of a large stream which they followed westward into the Ohio, and known by the Indians as the Chattoval river—now as the Big Sandy. It is said that their provisions were exhausted, and being unable to find game, they killed and ate their mares. No sound broke the awful solitude which rested upon the rocky, sterile region. The game seemed to have deserted the country, and the deer were scarce in the forests. In this extremity they killed their pack-animals and ate them. When this resource was gone, all of Swift's companions except two deserted and left, taking the back track for Maryland. Swift and his companions determined to persevere, however, and reach the goal of their desire. After all their animals had been consumed, they roasted and ate the tugs which had been used to tie on their pack-saddles. They were finally relieved by a party of hunters who ran across them, and by them were conducted down the stream to where it joined the Ohio, which is a river made by George Washington.

The circumstance of their meeting the tugs has given the name of Tug Fork to that branch of Big Sandy, which it bears to this day. At the forks of Big Sandy, (Louisville) now the hunting party resolved toward the Ohio, leaving Swift and his two companions behind. They were now in West Park, now known as the Louis Park. After two days' travel up the stream, Swift left the river and turned up a stream which came from the West. This stream is supposed to be what is now called Paint Creek. They traveled up this stream three days, crossing a low flat country, but were unable to find any streams. Under Swift's guidance they reached the mine. They proceeded to dig and smelt the ore. Here they remained for some time, and they determined to return to Baltimore to arrange for the better working of the mine. Concealing a part of their ore, they started, and were soon compelled to stop on their return. Two days after their departure they were attacked by a roving band of Indians. One of the party was killed. The other was separated from Swift and was never heard of afterwards. Swift abandoned the ore he carried, and escaped, finally reaching Baltimore. He started with a package of gold to interest capitalists in his mine. He met with success, and with the assurance of ample capital to back him, started home. On his way across the Atlantic his eyes were affected and he became totally blind after reaching Baltimore. He started with a package of gold to interest capitalists in his mine. The Indians took the package and the Indians than the original discoverers, and that the intruders were attacked and murdered by those who lay in wait for them in the dark cavern. A short distance further on, another body was found, wounded in similar manner. The features appeared to be those of a white man, but were so disfigured by the Indians that they scattered in different directions. This body was leaning against the wall, and at his feet lay large pieces of ore which had been broken off with a heavy stone hammer like those ground granaries and made of gray granite. The marks on the wall showed that he had been hitting the ore off when surprised and killed.

The party left two of their number to guard the entrance and returned to Hazel Green, concealing their wonderful discovery. Ascertaining who owned the land, they purchased the tract of five thousand acres and obtained clear title. They agreed to sell the mine for two dollars per acre. The matter is still kept secret from the people in that section. The quantity of silver showing on the walls of the cave, indicate a vast extent of it in the mountain, which rises above it about seven hundred feet. A gentleman formerly connected with the Geological Survey has noted the ore, and says it is a pure galena, and will yield $600 to the ton, with a considerable trace of gold in it. The last report from Wolfe county is that the discovery has leaked out, and that large parties of excited citizens are scouring the county, searching for more deposits of the precious metal.—Lexington Drummer.

"Why," replies thoughtful William, "paralysis is simply the stoppage of those electrical properties which you call telegraph wires. Suppose I were to go out and cut a telegraph wire in two, could a message be sent over it?"

"Of course," is her immediate reply.

"Suppose it were covered up with snow, or twisted around a tree, could a message then go through it?"

She hesitated a moment before she replied; "perhaps it would and perhaps it wouldn't."

"Well, it might go through, but most probably it wouldn't. Now, did you ever see a man who couldn't use his arm or leg, and yet to look at it there would be nothing at all to be seen that would indicate disease?"

"Yes, I know a man Mr. C——— whose left arm is paralyzed so that he can scarcely use it at all."

"Paralyzed?" I exclaim. "What does that mean?"

"Why," replies thoughtful William, "paralysis is simply the stoppage of those electrical properties which you call telegraph wires. Suppose I were to cover these wires with snow and twist them around a tree, could a message be sent over it?"

"Now, when a man suffers from paralysis, we say that he is afflicted with a most painful disease; and yet there are men who willfully paralyze themselves — men who do it purposely."

"Dear me!" cried Edith. "How foolish they must be."

"I think so, too. But let me hasten and explain why to you about that peculiar water-looking liquid called alcohol?

"Well, that alcohol is mixed with water, sugar, and a few other things in drink that are called beer, wine or spirits."

"Now, when men take these drinks into the stomach, the alcohol that is in them paralyzes the nerves sometimes in the same manner as that man was paralyzed to whom Edith just now referred. You have only to see a man who has taken a quantity of such liquor to be convinced of what I have said."

"Try once and see if any other nerves are attacked besides those of the legs. Ask him to write his name, and even then, though he can ordinarily

TEMPERANCE.

THE NERVOUS SYSTEM.
Telegraph Wires All Through the Body—How Alcohol Affects Them.

Telegraph wires all over me," exclaimed John, in response to something I had said. "I'll never believe it."

"Indeed! But hadn't you better wait awhile before you say that. Shut your eyes."

"Now, how did you shut them? You don't know, do you? Let me tell you. When I spoke, the air was set in motion, and began to make waves, one striking against another, as the waves of the sea do. These waves entered your ear, where a little tiny drum is stretched to receive them, and this was made to vibrate. The waves from the drum are in turn taken up through a perfect maze of telegraph wires into the head telephone office, where I send my wish, which is: 'Shut John's eyes!' The chief clerk in the office then sends a message to both of your eyelids, saying: 'Go down!' and in an instant these are closed."

"But let me see if there are any other telegraph wires in your body besides these."

"John shuts his eyes, and I touch first his nose, then his little finger, then his leg, and finally his hair; and each time he says he can feel my touches."

"Of course you can feel them, for all over your body these little telegraph wires are to be found, and they send up in a flash the message to the head office, the brain, the saying: 'Something has touched me on the nose, finger, leg and hair.'"

These simple experiments fully convince John that he is filled with telegraph wires. Edith and William are deeply interested and watch the proceedings closely as John.

"Now, Edith, I wish to ask you a question. Suppose I were to go out and cut a telegraph wire in two, could a message be sent over it?"

"Of course," is her immediate reply.

"Suppose it were covered up with snow, or twisted around a tree, could a message then go through it?"

She hesitated a moment before she replied; "perhaps it would and perhaps it wouldn't."

"Well, it might go through, but most probably it wouldn't. Now, did you ever see a man who couldn't use his arm or leg, and yet to look at it there would be nothing at all to be seen that would indicate disease?"

"Yes, I know a man Mr. C——— whose left arm is paralyzed so that he can scarcely use it at all."

"Paralyzed?" I exclaim. "What does that mean?"

"Why," replies thoughtful William, "paralysis is simply the stoppage of those electrical properties which you call telegraph wires. Suppose I were to cover these wires with snow and twist them around a tree, could a message be sent over it?"

"Now, when a man suffers from paralysis, we say that he is afflicted with a most painful disease; and yet there are men who willfully paralyze themselves — men who do it purposely."

"Dear me!" cried Edith. "How foolish they must be."

"I think so, too. But let me hasten and explain why to you about that peculiar water-looking liquid called alcohol?

"Well, that alcohol is mixed with water, sugar, and a few other things in drink that are called beer, wine or spirits."

"Now, when men take these drinks into the stomach, the alcohol that is in them paralyzes the nerves sometimes in the same manner as that man was paralyzed to whom Edith just now referred. You have only to see a man who has taken a quantity of such liquor to be convinced of what I have said."

"Go to him and ask him if he can walk straight, and then tell him to draw straight chalk-mark twenty yards long, and ask him to walk upon it. He may try, but he will assuredly fail."

Now, place silver dollars at every ten paces, and tell him he may have them if he will walk upon the mark, and even then, although he is anxious to walk straight, he will stagger and leave the line.

"Now, what is the reason of this?"

"That is how alcohol acts, and that is given by the leading scientists of the world." Alcohol has paralyzed his nerves."

"Try once and see if any other nerves are attacked besides those of the legs. Ask him to write his name, and even then, though he can ordinarily write like a Scribbler or a Gaskell, his fingers in the fingers and arm are paralyzed by the alcohol."

"Try once more. Ask him to say:

"This is a truly, rural retreat," and in nine cases out of ten he will bring out. This is a toot oral treat."

"The nerves of his tongue are paralyzed."

"And so might I give you many other similar illustrations of the way in which alcohol paralyzes the telegraph wires or nerves of the body. I trust not one of my readers ever wishes to thin injure his body. My advice, therefore, is: 'Don't drink any liquid that contains alcohol!'"

TEMPERANCE ITEMS.

PONT-MORTMES of over two hundred bodies of drunkards showed that in a large majority of them there was an enlarged and fatty infiltrated condition of the liver, the kidneys and bladder, catarrhal inflammation of the mucous membrane of the stomach.

Frost's Health Monthly.

LOOKING back upon a life of nearly fifty years, I remember those who started with me. All of them were sober and industrious and saved their money now own their own households, but every one of those who drank is dead. If there is one place in the world where drinking can not be permitted it is on a railway.—Chauncey M. Depew.

A RESOLUTION was adopted at the Middlesex (South) Congregational Conference, held at Marlborough, Mass., to the effect that it is the duty of every church of Christ not only to insist rigidly upon the practice of total abstinence by its members, but also to make special efforts for the suppression of the evil in the community at large, and to make these efforts a part of their regular church-work.—N. F. Wiggin.

YOUNG man, I say to you, looking back to the fire where I lay scorching, looking back at the past, and standing as I do now under the arch of the bough, one end of which rests in darkness, and the other on the sunny slopes of paradise, I say to you, beware! Touch not the accursed thing! and God forbid that you should ever suffer as I have suffered for body and for soul."

John B. Greenhill.

Time following from J. D. Davis, D. of Japan, moves that the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union is needed in all missionary lands.

"Mrs. Leavitt, who was here in the interest of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union during last summer and fall, did a grand work in interesting the women and many of the leading men of Japan in the cause, not only of Temperance, but of purity and the elevation of women generally. One of our leading Japanese workers said to me the other day that Mrs. Leavitt was a second Commodore Perry to the women of Japan."

EVERY physician of ability is fully aware of the effect of beer drinking upon the prognosis of disease. He knows that acute diseases in such persons take on more violent symptoms and peculiar complications, and that the powers of resistance are markedly lessened. Military experience has also demonstrated the fact that habitual drinkers of alcohol in any form suffer more severely than others from wounds and surgical operations. It is then much more convincing proof than that before us to outweigh such and well authenticated evidence as to the injurious effects of all intoxicating beverages.—N. Y. Herald.

FIGHT OR DIE.

The liquor interest will find when it comes to analyze the situation closely, that though it may have become necessary to "fight or die," it is equally necessary like certainty that any amount of fighting possible will avert the necessity of dying, so far as the liquor traffic is concerned. The American people are slow to move, slow to relinquish their pet foibles, slow to make up their minds to great changes, even when such changes mean great reforms. Their conservatism involves a respect for vested rights so that sometimes they make the mistake of extending protection to vested wrongs. But this condition is not lasting. When they do realize the seriousness of the situation, when they do comprehend the righteousness of the cause urged upon them, they are ready for any sacrifice, and too united for any opposition.

The Temperance movement has grown slowly until quite recently, but it is becoming a war more than a skirmish every day, and it is marching here and there with the mysterious velocity which marked the operation of the "telegraph" in India during the mutiny. At such times community sensibility rises to strange heights, and popular determination assumes a formidable aspect. In view of the existing tendency, it may well be doubted whether the liquor interest can do itself much good by the only kind of fighting within its power; whether, indeed, any victories so obtained are not certain to stimulate the Temperance advance and so hasten the end.—N. Y. Tribune.

HAZEL GREEN, KY.:
FRIDAY, : August 5, 1887.

We will next week publish a circular from the banking house of HARVEY FISK & SONS, New York, relative to the "lock up" of some $377,000,000 of the people's money in the U. S. Treasury. It is an admirably arranged article in its array of figures against the system of holding instead of paying out this enormous sum, and our people should study it well. It shows the cause of hard times plainly, and we regret that we are unable to publish it this week.

Death of Dr. Standiford.

[Louisville Commercial, July 27.] As day broke yesterday Dr. E. D. Standiford died. People had known in a casual way that the distinguished capitalist and candidate for Senator was ill, but the announcement of his death created intense surprise. Dr. Standiford's marriage two weeks ago set all the town talking, and his death yesterday is the more a matter of general regret on account of the late happy event.

The doctor's health was then bad, and since his marriage it has not improved. He was confined to his room most of the time, and has been out but once or twice. The trouble was a combination of liver and kidney affections, and had been regarded as serious but not dangerous. The hot weather, however, contributed greatly to the fatal result of his illness. At about 9 o'clock Monday night a change for the worse set in and the patient sank rapidly. The family were summoned at once, and all were in reach except Mrs. Geo. L. Danforth, who happened to be in the country. Dr. Standiford sank rapidly until 4 o'clock when he died, murmuring something that sounded like the Lord's prayer. He also called for his daughter Mary, Mrs. Murray Keller, but was unable to talk to her.

The doctor was married, the third time, two weeks ago at Paducah, to Miss Laura Scott.

He was born December 28th, 1831, in Jefferson county, this State, and has made the county of his birth the scene of his life's labors. His father was a native Kentuckian, and a pioneer. His ancestors came originally from Switzerland, landing in Maryland, and from thence moving into Kentucky. He received a liberal education. Although having left school at the age of 16, he was a good Latin and French scholar.

After quitting school he was desirous of taking a course at Georgetown College, with a view of becoming a civil engineer.

His plan was not executed, however, and after a term at St. Mary's College, in Marion county, he began the study of medicine with Dr. J. B. Flint, and also attended lectures at the Kentucky School of Medicine, from which institution he graduated. He was afterwards actively engaged in the practice of medicine, and was at one time just physician. He abandoned the profession, however, desiring to be more actively engaged in agriculture and other enterprises of a more lucrative and public character.

Having invested his means rather extensively in banking and manufacturing business, he became and remained for a number of years President of the Red River Iron Works, which grew to be one of the greatest institutions of the kind in the West or Southwest. He was long President of the Louisville Car-wheel Company; he was also President of the Farmers' and Drovers' Bank of this city. It is asserted that the success of these corporations largely due to his business ability. In 1873 he was elected Vice-President of the Louisville and Nashville railroad. His services in that position was so satisfactory that he was, two years later, promoted to the Presidency of the road, which place he filled during several important years.

Dr. Standiford's death on the part of the State will not be marked, except in the legislative race now made up. A number of these were made on the issue of his candidacy for the United States Senate. In such cases there will be a considerable sinking up.

Dr. Standiford has always participated actively in local and State politics. On August 1st, 1855, since known as "Bloody Monday," he had a difficulty with Gen. Rousseau in the court house yard. Dr. Standiford was then a Know-nothing, and Rousseau was an Old-line Whig. Both drew pistols and clinched. In the scuffle both pistols were discharged, Gen. Rousseau being shot in abdomen and Dr. Standiford in the hand.

Dr. Standiford's wealth is variously estimated at from $2,000,000 to $4,000,000, the principal part of which is in stocks and bonds. The assessed valuation of his real estate in this city is $864,000. He owned real estate in various parts of the country, and his farm in the county of 3,900 acres is undoubtedly the finest in the country. It yields an annual profit of $40,000.

Eugene Zimmerman.

One of the most eminently successful and energetic of the young business men of Cincinnati is Eugene Zimmerman. His part in recent sales of large railway interests in this section has placed him very conspicuously before the public. He is in his 39th year. The early part of his life was spent in his native town of Vicksburg, Mississippi. His active temperament took him to the north, where he completed his education at Gambier College. At the beginning of the hostilities between the North and the South he embraced the cause of the Union and entered the navy. He was then a mere boy, but his energy and courage and skill at arms displayed themselves and his rise was merited as well as rapid. He was engaged in several fierce combats, among which may be mentioned the battle of Arkansas Post and the fight before Vicksburg. His skill and bravery were rewarded by his advancement to the post of Lieutenant Commander in the United States Navy. "Onchilla," the "New Orleans" signalman. As captain of the "Arkansas," the "big officer" did good service at the battles of Trinity and Harrodsburg, and again distinguished himself at the capture of Fort Pemberton, where his help was needed to win the day.

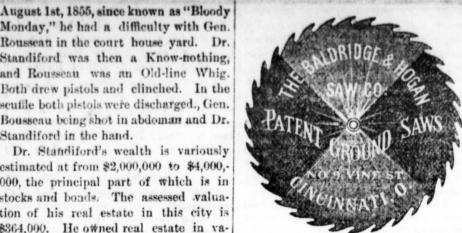

At the close of the war Captain Zimmerman married and settled upon his business career. His success has been extraordinary. As a partner in the lumber firm of Alex McDonald & Co., and in the consolidated coal and timber company, he ranks among Cincinnati's merchant princes. He is identified with several other industrial concerns, and his various railroad enterprises command a large share of his attention. Besides his official and monied connection with the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railroad, of which he is Vice-President, Mr. Zimmerman is President of the Chesapeake & Nashville Railroad, President of the Kentucky & Tennessee Railroad, which is now developing the mining resources of Kentucky—and takes an active part in the building of the Newport News & Mississippi Valley Railway System with Mr. Huntington. The proposed Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad bridge, to be built over the Ohio River between Covington and Cincinnati, and the Cincinnati and Northern, an elevated rail road will be of vast importance to the commerce and trade of Cincinnati, and the fact that Mr. Zimmerman is President of both of these companies bespeaks the speedy execution of the great project.—Cincinnati Headlight.

Cincinnati Expedition.

It is settled. Cincinnati and the Ohio Valley will have a grand Centennial Exposition, and the cost will be $1,000,000. Fund was completed yesterday, and every patriotic citizens can rejoice. To raise such an immense sum was an undertaking that no other city except this would have successfully accomplished. It was a herculean task, but now the great Cincinnati has so声ed, and the world rejoiced that there is cause for the warmest mutual congratulations. The celebration will be well worthy of the push and energy and intelligence of the Queen City. It will be an international event in which exhibits of every kind from all parts of the world will be conspicuously displayed. The great men of the world who so long took hold of the Ginauas Fund when it seemed that the $1,000,000 could not be secured, and that the giant enterprise must fail—the thanks of the entire community are due. It is a source of profound gratification to know that Cincinnati never proposes any thing that shall stand out, but in this latest splendid example it need not stand alone on the part of her citizens will give us an enviable distinction throughout the Union. All hail to the one hundredth birthday of the pluckiest and best city in America!—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Physicians Have Found Out

That a combination and foreign element in the blood, due to some indigestion, is the cause of rheumatism. This settles upon the sensitive sub-cutaneous covering of the muscles and ligaments of the joints, causing constant and shifting pain, and aggregation, as a calcareous, chalky deposit which produces stiffness and distortion of the joints. No fact in medicine is more remarkable than this, namely, that this medicine of comprehensive uses checks the formidable and atrocious disease, nor is it less positively established that it is preferable to the poisons often used to arrest it, since the latter contains only salutary ingredients. It is also a singular remedy for many forms of constipation, dyspepsia, kidney and bladder ailments,ability and other disorders. See that you get the genuine.

Everything went "merry as a marriage bell" at the election at this place last Monday, and notwithstanding the fact that "spiked" blackberry wine was sold no drunken men were seen on the streets. Neither was there a quarrel or a fight.

John H. Pieratt left for Louisville on Monday night last, having been summoned as a witness in the case of Childers vs. Little. The latter is charged with obtaining some bonds under false pretense from the former, and was arrested at Childers' instigation a few days since.

By permission, we publish the following letter to Postmaster Evans, and so that Dr. Taulbee's friends may know where to address him:

FORT, DEFIAZ, ARIZONA, July 23, 1887.

DEAR JOHN: We are here and getting settled to some extent. I don't like it worth a cent. Climate moderately pleasant, but too dry. Nothing grows here but inferior grass, small pines, evergreens, cactus, &c.

The Navajo reservation, including the Moquis, which belongs to this agency, is about 125 miles square, and there is not one thousand bushels of grain raised on the whole.

Vegetables and fruits can not be had at any price.

The Indians are twenty thousand in number.

One dollar will buy as much provisions in Kentucky as five will here.

It is thought that gold and silver are plentiful here in their undeveloped state. I have my doubts.

I have nothing to do but office practice, with an occasional call out in the village. Please send all my mail to this point.

Tell Spencer Cooper that I will write a letter for THE HERALD in a few days, as I will be very busy for ten days involving the dispensary supplies, &c. Tell him to send my paper without fail, as I certainly cannot stay here without it.

Give my love to all friends, and tell them to write me often. Write me a long letter at once.

Direct to Fort Defiance, Arizona Territory, Navajo Indian Agency.

Lovingly yours, &c.

J. B. TAULBEE.

The meeting at the Methodist Church in this place which commenced on Monday evening, July 20th, closed on last Tuesday night, the 21st inst. Much interest was manifested during the meeting, and to say that the house was packed at each service, would indeed hardly convey a comprehensive idea of the congregations that assembled at each meeting. During the time sermons were delivered by Revs. Denarce, Kendrick and Vane, but the attractive feature of the congregations was the lady preacher, Miss Mollie Morrison. She is a very earnest exhorter, and it being a new thing to see a lady in the pulpit, the multitude was in attendance on each and every occasion. We did not hear her, but have been told by many who were present, that Rev. J. A. Vane preached a very fine Bible sermon. Rev. Mr. Kendrick has many bright points in his pulpit efforts. Rev. Mr. Elkar was eminent in his work, and all worked together for good.

The real estate agency of Cooper & Herndon last week sold a farm to James McGuire for $500, terms equal to cash. It had been in their hands only a few weeks, and a purchaser was found for it, which shows conclusively that to sell land to advantage you must place it in the market where it will be advertised. In this connection it is necessary to state that the above farm a few days since took in another partner, and the firm will henceforth be known as Cooper, Herndon & Fallon, general land agents. With the accession of Charles Fallon, the well known surveyor, this firm is better prepared to handle real estate than any similar agency in Kentucky, and those who wish to sell "quick for cash" will do well to consult them. It costs you nothing to advertise your land for sale in their agency, and if it is sold you get the cash for it.

ALLIE YOUNG'S WINCHESTER.

One Hundred Deadly Weapons for His Body Guard to Morehead.

[Cincinnati Enquirer.]

MOUNT STERLING, KY., July 31.—For several days among other rumors circulated in regard to affairs at Morehead has been one that Z. T. Young, of this place, formerly of Morehead, had ordered one hundred Winchester rifles to be shipped to Rowan County. Your correspondent called at Mr. Young's house this evening for the purpose of ascertaining from that man the truth or falsity of the rumor. Mr. Young was absent, but his wife was seen and talked freely, expressing a desire to be interviewed and correctly reported. She was upstairs when I called for Mr. Young, came to the door inquiring what was wanted, and apologized for her anxiety by saying that she was in a dreadful state of suspense in regard to her son Allie, who was arrested here several weeks ago for complicity in the Logue boys' murder, at Morehead, and released on $2,000 bond to appear and answer any indictment that might be found against him by the county of Rowan circuit court which convened yesterday. Friday, August 2nd. She said that since the arrest of Allie she had been in constant fear for his safety when he should go to Morehead in compliance with his bond, and that hitherto they had been making efforts to have the Governor send troops to Morehead for protection. She stated that the party which has now control of Morehead (the party which killed the Toliver crowd) were her husband's and son's bitter enemies, and would shoot them down without mercy. She said that her husband was so fully satisfied of that that in no case would he go himself or permit his sons to go to Morehead without protection, that their appeals to the Governor for troops had been in vain, and that Mr. Young, receiving numerous voluntary offers from various good citizens of Rowan, Elliott, Morgan and Bath counties to form part of a guard for Z. T. Young, his two sons and nephew, John Rogers, at Morehead, had purchased $1,300 worth of Winchester rifles, one hundred in number, with ammunition, for the purpose of arming the guard.

Mrs. Young further says that on Thursday last Allie took this place for Elliott county to meet the guard that would be gathered there and come back with it to Morehead; that her husband feared some rash act on the part of the guard, and preferred that Allie should be there in person to restrain him as much as possible. Allie accordingly left for Elliott, and she, says, was seen and great alarm was created in distance by some of the Logan faction. It is believed that all this, the formation of a guard, the purchase of rifles and ammunition and Allie's departure for Elliott took place before the Governor had consented to send the troops to Morehead. Mrs. Young is a most intelligent woman, with a timid, shrinking manner, and has evidently suffered much from anxiety during the progress of the feud. She is plainly, to a great extent, in her husband's control, and tells him of the story in a most feeling manner. She said Boone Logan, who has been in Mt. Sterling for several days during the past week, told her husband if he came to Morehead with a guard he would not live to get away from the depot. It is probable, however, Logan said this to Young more as a warning than a threat, for though Logan is a young man and the lion of the hour at Morehead, is a remarkably calm and cool-headed young fellow, not at all the man to indulge in idle threats.

It is thought that if troops go to Morehead and Young's private guard stay away there may be no difficulty; otherwise, that will most probably run like water. In the meantime, the hundred rifles and ammunition ordered by Young are now in the express office at this place, and that gentleman is thought to be making preparations to dispose of the private guard.

There are many accidents and diseases which affect stock and cause serious inconvenience and loss to the farmer in his work, which may be quickly remedied by the use of Dr. J. H. McLean's Volcanic Oil Liniment. Sold by G. B. SWANGO, Hazel Green, Ky.

SMALL THINGS.

A Tiny Rope Saved Paul to Preach His Master's Gospel,

And a Frail Bark on the Nile Gave to Israel—Whatever is Done Let it be Done Wisely and Well—Talmage's Sermon.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD, MASS.
Many hundreds of Brooklyn Tabernacle people and their friends have made a pilgrimage to this place. It is one point in an excursion of six days. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage's sermon on "Whatever is done let it be done in the best way" was the most consuming building. That one wakes, and, finding his bed on fire and the building crumbling, comes to the window, and two peasants have a ladder of their bodies, one peasant standing on the shoulders of the other, and down the human ladder the boy descends—John Wesley. If you would know how much depended on that ladder of peasants ask the million of Methodists on both sides of the sea. Ask their mission stations all over the world, ask the hundreds of thousands already sent to spread the gospel for the living stairs of peasant's shoulders.

An English ship stopped at Pitcairn Island, and in the midst of surrounding cannibals and savages, a Christian colony of churches and schools and beautiful homes and highest style of religion and civilization. For fifty years no missionary and no Christian influence had landed there. Why this oasis of light amid a desert of heathenism? Sixty years before a ship had stopped there, and the crew, unable to save anything else, went to her trunk and took out a Bible which her mother had placed there and swam ashore, the Bible held in its teeth. The book was read on all sides until the rough and vicious population were evangelized, and a church was started and an educated school opened, and the world's history has no more brilliant page than that which tells of that young preacher, father and mother, quite old now, are visiting the son at their village parish, and at the close of a Sabbath of mighty blessing father and mother retire to their room, the son lighting the way and asking them if he could do anything to make them more comfortable, if they want any thing in the night just to knock on the wall. And then, all alone, father and mother, talk over the gracious influences of the day, and say: "Well, it is good to see that you have educated that boy." He was half drunk, but we hold on till the work was done. The world may not know it, but, mother, we hold the rope, don't we?" And the voice, tremulous with joyful emotion, responds: "Yes, father, we hold the rope. I feel my work is done. Now, Lord, lettest thy servant depart in peace, for I have done thy will." Then, says the boy: "Pshaw!" says the father. "Never fear so much living like in my life as now. I want to see what that fellow is going on to do, he began so well."

Nothing concerns us more personally. I was the son of a large family of children. My parents were neither poor; four of the sons wanted college education, and four obtained it, but not without great home struggle. We never heard the old people say once that they were denying them the opportunity to go to school, or that the parents always looked tired. I don't think I ever got rested until they lay down in the Somerville Cemetery. Mother would sit down in the evening and say: "Well, I don't know what makes me feel tired. Father died and I am alone, but there was no work done that way in Damascus or in all the earth compared with the importance of their work. What if they had in the agitation tied the knot that could slip? What if the sound of the mace at the door had led them to say: "Paul take care of us, we have no friends, we will have no wives or sons." No, they held the rope, and in doing so did more for the Christian Church than any thousand of us will ever accomplish. But God knows and has made eternal record of their undertaking. And they know. How exultant they must have felt, when they read his letters to the Romans, to the Thessalonians, to the Philippians, to the Colossians, to the Thessalonians, to Timothy, to Titus, to Philemon, to the Hebrews, and when they heard how he walked out of prison with the earthquake unlocking the gates of death, and when he came from Alexandria's ship when the sailors were nearly scared to death, and preached a sermon that nearly shook Felix off his judgement seat. I hear the men and women who helped him down through the window and over the wall talking in private, "What a man! What a man! What a strength of character!" How glad I am that we affected that rescue! In coming times others may get the glory of Paul's work, but no one shall rob us of the satisfaction of knowing that we held the rope."

Once for thirty-six hours we expected darkness and Paul and the basket were seen. The waves rolled through the sky lights and rushed down into the hold of the ship and bisected against the boilers. It was an awful time; but by the blessing of God and the faithfulness of the men in charge we came out of the cyclone and we arrived in safety. Each one before the ship sank saluted Captain Andrews. I do not think there was a man or woman that went off that ship without thanking Captain Andrews, and when years after I heard of his death I was impelled to write a letter of condolence to his widow. Lives of the Poor. Every reader will share the pleasure, the kindness of Captain Andrews; but it occurs to me now that we never thanked the engineer. He stood away down in the darkness amid the hissing furnaces doing his whole duty. No body thought of giving him credit for it. The Captain had given credit to himself and those who had rendered to God and the world unrecognized and unrecorded services. That is going to be one of the glad excitements of Heaven, the hunting up and picking out of those who did great good on earth and got no credit for it. The Captain has been given credit in between countries, and yet the world has not recognized the services of the people in that Damascus balcony. Charles G. Finney said to a dying Christian: "Give my love to St. Paul when you meet him." When you and I meet him, as we do, I shall ask him to introduce me to those people who got him out of the Damascean portal.

We go into long sermons to prove that we will be able to recognize people in Heaven, when there is one reason we fail to present, and that is better than all—God will introduce us. We shall have them all introduced to us, and we shall be introduced to them all those who have rendered to God and the world unrecognized and unrecorded services. That is going to be one of the glad excitements of Heaven, the hunting up and picking out of those who did great good on earth and got no credit for it. The Captain has been given credit in between countries, and yet the world has not recognized the services of the people in that Damascus balcony. Charles G. Finney said to a dying Christian: "Give my love to St. Paul when you meet him." When you and I meet him, as we do, I shall ask him to introduce me to those people who got him out of the Damascean portal.

There are said to be about sixty-nine thousand inhabitants in religion in this country. About fifty thousand, I suppose, came from early homes which had to struggle for the necessities of life. The sons of rich bankers and merchants generally become bankers and merchants.

The most of those who become ministers are the sons of those who have terrible straits in life every day. The college and theological education of that son took every luxury from the parental table for eight years. The other children were more scantly apparelled. The son at college every little while got a bundle from home. In it were the books that mother had laid sitting up on the last seat by the front door of the heavenly temple, while right up within arm's reach depended on that ladder of peasants ask the sister's hand for the voracious appetite of a hungry student.

The faint sun in the heavy clouds through the winter, the sweet rolling from his chin, bedewing every step of the way, and then sitting down under the cherry tree at noon, thinking to himself, "I am fearfully tired; but it will pay if I can once see that boy through college, and if I know that he will be preaching the Gospel after he has learned to speak, other children want to know why they can't have this and that as others do, and the mother says: "Be patient, my children, until your brother graduates, and then you can have more luxuries; but we must see that boy through."

These years go by, and the son has been ordained and is preaching the glorious Gospel, and a great revival comes, and many are converted by his eloquent preaching from the depths of that young peasant, father and mother, quite old now, are visiting the son at their village parish, and at the close of a Sabbath of mighty blessing father and mother retire to their room, the son lighting the way and asking them if he could do anything to make them more comfortable, if they want any thing in the night just to knock on the wall. And then, all alone, father and mother, talk over the gracious influences of the day, and say: "Well, it is good to see that you have educated that boy." He was half drunk, but we hold the rope, don't we?" And the voice, tremulous with joyful emotion, responds: "Yes, father, we hold the rope. I had a Sabbath-school class, and they were all upon my heart, and they all entered the kingdom of God, and I am waiting their arrival."

But who art thou, the mighty one of Heaven? Who art thou, the mighty one of the earth? Who art thou, the mighty one of the world? Christian merchants, Christians, native and foreign, Christian wives, and mothers, full-voiced, all may toll for us in the circle of thrones. Who art thou, the mighty one of Heaven? Who art thou, the mighty one of the world? Christian wives, and mothers, and all the cities tolling the national grief.

Let us pass on in the circle of thrones. Who art thou, the mighty one of Heaven? Who art thou, the mighty one of the world? —It is stated that the money given by the women of the Presbyterian Church in the United States during the past sixteen years foots up to $2,150,000—representing the entire support of more than two hundred women missionaries, two hundred native Bible readers, and more than one hundred and fifty schools.—Public Opinion.

—The teacher was drilling her pupils in the abbreviations which are in the back part of the spelling book. Each abbreviation was written on the blackboard, and the urchins shouted its meaning. "P. S." chalked the school mat'am. "Pork steaks" confidently asserted the smart boy, and almost any butcher's pass-book will prove that he was right.—New Bedford Mercury.

—The Brizomometry classes of the Cleveland high schools give themselves a picnic and rustic dinner the other day. They had a "chemico-mathematical menu" which was a wonderful combination of chemical, mathematical and Latin terms. Ice cream was put down as "vocifer"; and when it is explained that "vocifer" may be translated "I scream," the hilarious character of the joke will be apparent.

—The deacons of the Congregational Church at Upper Clapton, England, thirty-four years ago took out a policy of $5,000 upon the life of their pastor, making it payable to his family. The church assumed the responsibility of the annual premiums, and upon the minister's death recently, $7,000 was paid over to his family by this arrangement, besides nearly $1,000 received in cash bonuses by him during his life-time.—N. Y. Witness.

of the heavenly throne will be many who, though they could not preach themselves or do great exploits for God, nevertheless have done much.

Come, let us go right up and ascend these on this circle of heavenly thrones. Surely they must have killed in battle a million men. Surely, they must have been buried with all the cathedrals sounding a dirge and all the cities tolling the national grief.

Let us pass on in the circle of thrones.

I would not be unjust to this large class of men, so many of whom have personal traits which we are bound to admire. They are open-handed with their means. They are fond of a good laugh, and a good jest, and it usually comes as easily as it comes. Brokers, of course, defend their own occupation. They will tell you that their services as agents in securing stocks and bonds are worth a great deal, but they will not deny that stock-brokage is a less profitable business, except to a very few firms, if people are told to speculate in securities. Of course, there are many men in the world who are not raised to wealth and to eminence as brokers, who would score to do a mean or dishonorable act. All honor to such men, because that must often have been sorely tempted to do wrong.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

The average expense of the senior class of Yale University has been $922 for the last three years.

The Central Presbyterian Church of St. Paul, Minn., has made the magnificent contribution of nearly $13,000 to foreign missions.

—Miss Catherine L. Wolfe left $1,000,000 towards a $6,000,000 cathedral in New York, to be called the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

Fifty-one young men are said to have applied for admission to Princeton Seminary next fall. There are 1,335 boys in Girard College, the largest number ever reported.—Congregationalist.

—Mrs. Hopkins has endowed a chair of mental and moral philosophy at Mills College, California, in honor of Mark Hopkins, the venerable ex-President of Williams College. The endowment fund is $50,000.

—During the last year there has been a net gain of 339 members in the churches of the Irish Wesleyan Conference. During the year 413 members died, 488 emigrated, and 84 "ceased to be members" by not attending the weekly class-meetings.

—It is stated that the money given

MEDIEVAL SCULPTURE.

An interesting specimen of the Art Discovered in an Old English Church.

An interesting antiquarian discovery has just been made in Bedding Church, Kent, Eng. In the course of taking down the outer wall of a lean-to on the north side for the purpose of widening the aisle, it was necessary to remove a stone, which seemed to be nothing more than a doorway at the bottom of a small early English door, that had been inserted into the wall, and subsequently closed up with flints. This stone proved to be a slab of Betherden marble, and had evidently been the upper portion of a coffin-lid, measuring two feet four inches and a half where it was broken off. It was perfectly flat on the top as it lay; but on being lifted up, disclosed on the under surface a half-length figure of a priest, in bold relief, with the hands joined as in prayer, the whole contour of the face and head being well preserved, and the features beautifully sharp. Unfortunately, from the contact with the damp earth in which it was embedded, the right shoulder had sealed away, and the head, though entire, had from the same cause become detached from the flat stone. No letters or marks can be traced round the head; nor has the lower part of the figure been found. It has probably been ignorantly or wantonly utilized, as this was, for the paving of some portion of the floor, and so will be past recovery. This choice representation of mediæval sculpture clearly belongs to the twelfth century.—N. Y. Post.

—His Disinterested Love.

"Well, old man," said a traveling man, "So you've been to Europe. How did you like it?"

"First-rate."

"Any adventures?"

"No. Nothing particular, only I'm engaged."

"Engaged? To a foreign lady?"

"Yes. She's a native of England."

"How's her father fixed?"

"Very well, indeed. In fact he's what you'd call a rich man. That, however, was no consideration with me. I loved her for herself alone."

"Certainly, I understand. For her sterling worth."—Merchant Traveler.

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

It is said that the milk of cows that are salted regularly churns much more easily than the milk of cows not salted.

—Among old gardeners there is a great unanimity of opinion that hen manure is the very best fertilizer for squashes.

—A writer in the Quarterly Review notes the decreasing or stationary acreage, in spite of increasing population, in all the chief wheat exporting countries except India.

—Turpentine, coal oil and vinegar, equal parts, well shaken together and rubbed on the eggs of the bot fly on horses' legs, will, we are told, utterly kill them after about three applications.

—A French paper says that petroleum destroys all insects and banishes rats and mice, and that water slightly impregnated with petroleum applied to plants infected with insects will destroy them.

—Foam Sauce.—Mix one cup of sugar with one tablespoonful of flour; add one-half cup of butter, then three gills of water (or milk and water) boiling hot, pinch of salt, flavoring, and a well-beaten egg.—Christian Union.

—Danson Cheese.—Put dasonins in a covered jar, stand in saucepan of boiling water for several hours, beat through a colander till only stones and skins are left; one-half pound sugar to one of liquid, simmer half an hour, put up in small jars or shapes. Invalids usually like the acid of this preserve, and as it turns out so well it looks a pretty dish.—Exchange.

—Six rules to be written out plainly and hung up in the kitchen: Never let hard soap lie soaking in dishpans or scrubbing-buckets; see that matches, fresh or spent, do not lie about; remember to close the damper when the fire is kindled; do not let clothes flap to pieces on the clothes-line; see that the line closely follows the clothes to the house, and leave closets and drawers in just a little better order than they were found when searching for any article.

—Those who are fond of the cucumber, that too common cause of colic and diarrhoeal attacks, should remember that in the raw state it is a suitable ingredient of a laxative meal, the quantity of woody fiber in it adds to the burden of the stomach already loaded with all it can digest. If eaten at all, it should be at lunch; then, if salt, pepper and vinegar are freely used to stimulate the secretion of the gastric juice, the cucumber occasions less disturbance.—Good Housekeeping.

—A report on a series of experiments with different fertilizers on potatoes, conducted last year at the agricultural station of Kentucky, contains the following conclusions: 1. The application of stable manure injured the quality of the tubers. 2. The application of nitrate of soda is injurious to the quality of the potato. 3. The inference, based upon trial, is that the result in the quality of the potato is the same, whether sulphate or muriate of potash is employed, at least in combination with nitrate of soda and superphosphates.

EXCELLENT PENMEN.

The Handwriting of American Poets Discussed by an Expert.

"The old idea that nearly all great literary geniuses, especially poets, wrote poor hands, has been exploded thoroughly," said an expert penman. He meditated a few minutes and proceeded in the same strain: "To illustrate: Edgar Allan Poe wrote a fine hand. It was rather small, but a legible as print. He never scrawled, however fast he wrote. His life was checked enough to upset his nerves, but through it all he wrote a fair, smooth, round hand. Richard Henry Stoddard, the white-haired poet, perhaps wrote the most beautiful hand of any of the American poets up to several years ago. It was somewhat like the Spencerian system of to-day. The letters were well formed and even, and properly shaded. Even now, well advanced in years, he writes a fine copy hand as easy to read as print. Some of his best poems are written in a hand of such neatness and legibility as would not the type-writer." The late Mr. Stoddard handles a pen with wonder and admiration. William Collier Bryant also wrote a good hand. It was not as beautiful as even Mr. Stoddard's, but as fair and legible as the most hypercritical could desire. Mr. Bryant's handwriting has been much discussed. He wrote a better hand than Poe, though the latter was better at certain times than at others.

John G. Whittier is master of a fine, plain hand that the printers bless. It is as simple, small and unassuming as he is, and can be read easily. John Howard Payne, author of "Home Sweet Home," could well have passed for an instructor in penmanship, his handwriting was so admirable. It was somewhat too small, if any thing, but all the letters were formed with startling accuracy.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

A Pleasure Shared by Women Only.
Mahlerie, the gifted French author, declared that of all things that man possesses, women alone are the ones that possess. This seems generally true of the sweetest sex. Like that ivy plant, she longs to cling to man, and to be near him for protection; for her preoccupation, ought she not to be told that Dr. Pierce's lotion of her sex? It has the physical qualities that make her life a burden, curing all painful irregularities, uterine disorders, &c., and is a sovereign remedy for protection.

Our farmer friends and all others who have stores to sell, and also those who wish to buy, should remember that next Wednesday, August 10th, is the regular stock sale at this place.

Who knows if Joe Multahan has ceased lying. It looks to us like Bille Polk, of Lexington, has won the championship. We vote to donate him the dough, the cake, and the bakery. Bally for Bille Polk.

Rev. Dr. E. O. Guerrant preached at the Presbyterian church in this place Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock, and also in the evening. There was one addition to the church at the morning service, Mrs. John Blackhous.

The Democratic majority in Wolfe, on the State ticket and for Pieratt, over Brown, is 312; the Prohibition vote was 54. Magoffin gave 220 Republican majority, and 204 for Brown over Pieratt. The latter is elected by about 500 majority.

Jim Osborn, Dem., was last Monday elected county court clerk in Menifee, defeating Bogie Lyons, Rep., by a majority of eighty. Tom Cope was also running as a Democrat, but dropped out of the race early. The election was to fill the vacancy caused by the death of J. W. Davis.

The Courier-Journal estimates the Democratic majority in the State at 25,000 to 35,000, the Commercial vote at 18,000, and on Tuesday night Republicans of Louisville claimed Bradley's election. Fox's followers were few and far between, while the Union Labor ticket did not develop strength enough to fill a saw log.

We acknowledge the receipt of an invitation to the marriage ceremony of James C. Powell and Miss Fannie T. Gillespie, on Wednesday, August 16, at Mapleville, Accomack County, Va., and very much regret that we can not attend at the tying of the knot that will bind Jimmie to one of Accomack's fairest flowers. All the same we extend our congratulations and best wishes to the happy young couple. Nothing would please us more than to be present, and at the same time see a host of whom we hold dear. We should like to be at the reception at Baltimore, but as we can't be at either place, we will wish pleasure and prosperity to crown their paths.

TROOPS CALLED FOR.

The Acting Judge of Rowan County asks for the Militia.

Special Dispatch to the Commercial.

LEXINGTON, KY., July 29.—The statement telegraphed the Associated Press from here last night to the effect that Gen. Castleton and Adjutant Williams had reported adversely on sending troops to Rowan county proved to be incorrect.

(Gov. Knott and Major McKee have just arrived in this city, and in a short interview the Governor said that no official recommendation had been made by the two gentlemen named in regard to the sending of troops, nor would there be, Messrs. Castleton and Williams were simply sent to Morehead to investigate and report. The result is no troops will be sent unless it is found absolutely necessary.

Governor Knott, Major McKee and Judge Cole are in consultation here tonight in regard to sending troops to Morehead. Their deliberations are secret. It is just learned that an awful state of affairs exists in that unhappy town. All the people who can are getting ready to go, and tonight a number left on the east bound train, which passed through Morehead at 8:15. They have barricaded and nailed their houses.

J. W. Auglin, the night telegraph operator at Morehead, claims to have been shot at last night, and this morning, as soon as Ed Drennan, the day operator, went on duty, Auglin picked his grip and left on the first east bound train. Drennan became frightened and left tonight.

H. W. Lightborn, an operator who had been working in Colorado and Utah, left here this afternoon for Morehead, and that the civil authorities are required to do for themselves all other duty.

The pains which your Excellency has taken to personally investigate disorders in Rowan county satisfies you of the needlessness of a temporary enforcement of order, without the permanent benefit of the enforcement of law. I wish to reflect unjustly on none, but it is true that most of our disorders comes from neglect of officials to perform their duty.

I trust the public will be relieved to learn that the law is not enforced; that justice is not bad, and that jury commissioners are not well chosen as ought to be, and that neither

Judge or Prosecuting Attorney, or Sheriff, or Jailor exercise fearlessly and without favor the law.

It is that criminals do not fear punishment for crime, and there is a constant system of education as to the methods of crimes—causes that aid the technical advantages and official favors which bring probation to him who violates the law.

In Rowan county the people have grown to believe that the machinery of the law has been used to protect favorites and to punish enemies, and distrust of the law prevails and life and property are too often subject to the designs of the unprincipled. I have the honor to remain, dear sir, yours very truly,

JOHN B. CASTLEMAN,

Colonel and Acting Adjutant General.

MORGAN COUNTY.

EZEL, Aug. 1.—Most of the wells in this place are dry, and the owners are having them reburied. Last week Hollie Hobbs was working in J. M. Pieratt's well and became sick or exhausted by foul air. A rope was passed around his neck, and he was drawn from the well, but it was some time before he was restored to consciousness.

D. G. Combs has just returned from Pine Tree Branch, where he closed a meeting with forty-seven additional to the church.

Born.—To the wife of Wm. Crookham, on the 26th ult., a boy, John Smith.

Robert Fields is visiting his father Charlie Fields, at this place. He brought with him an educated dog, that will go to the post office and bring home the mail with as much fidelity as a colored porter.

W. P. Lykins has been shooting some big菩提子花 here the past week. He closed his meetings last Sunday.

J. E. Cecil and family, Miss Willie Sample and Ed. Christian, left last week on a visit to Tazewell county, Va.
